

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair should NOT be allowed to proceed with this blatant attempt to help the Bush administration and this close to the election yet. What a sham and what a shame if the FCC does not stop this pathetic attempt at pure partisanship. This is not "news" and deserves no air time and especially when the stations are being told they HAVE to show it. How sad the media has become. Are there no rules or integrity anymore?

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
